BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Gleason Leonard Archer was born on October 29, 1880 in Great Pond, a remote outpost in northeastern Maine. Although his parents John Sewell Archer and Frances Williams Archer were descendants of the original Mayflower settlers, the Archer family was poor, depending on the lumber industry for subsistence. Following in the footsteps of his brothers, Archer set off to work in a nearby lumber camp at the age of thirteen, effectively putting his education on hold. In spite of this, Archer became a voracious reader and writer in the spare time afforded him as the camp's cook. Eventually, with financial support from an uncle, Gleason was able to leave the lumber camp to attend Sabattus High School in Maine. He graduated in June of 1902 as class valedictorian and came to Boston in the fall of 1902 to attend Boston University.

In 1903, a fortuitous meeting on a stagecoach with Boston businessman George Frost set Gleason Archer on the path to providing educational opportunities for those lacking access to higher education. Archer, bound for Boston to receive medical treatment for a knee injury sustained at his job at a Cape Cod resort, struck up a conversation with George Frost, president of the George Frost Company. By the time the stagecoach reached the railway station, Frost had learned of Archer's desire to become a lawyer and his trouble financing a legal education. Their conversation resulted in Frost offering to cover his medical expenses and becoming Archer's educational benefactor. With Frost's support, Archer was able to finish his undergraduate studies and his law degree by June of 1906. Frost never sought repayment, but asked only that if Archer "ever had a chance to pass this favor along to other boys, do it for me."<sup>1</sup>

Archer's response to Frost's generosity was to start a law school for non-traditional law students, namely immigrants, minorities, laborers and other groups deemed ineligible for admission at the elite law schools of the day. The first class of "Archer's Evening Law School" was held on September 19, 1906, at his apartment at 6 Alpine Street in Roxbury, Massachusetts. 1906 was also the year that Archer married Elizabeth Glenn Snyder, the daughter of the Reverend Henry S. Snyder.

The law school grew rapidly and by June of 1907 had moved to Archer's downtown Boston law offices at 53 Tremont Street. By December 1908, his first student had passed the bar exam, enrollment had increased, and Archer had decided to give up his law practice to devote all of his energies to his recently renamed Suffolk School of Law. Throughout this period, Archer's family lived in the school building and grew to include Allan (1908), Marian (1910) and Gleason Leonard, Jr. (1916). Archer saw enrollment jump again when his school was granted the right to confer degrees by the Massachusetts legislature in 1914. The school expanded its mission during the 1930s to include undergraduate education with the formation of the College of Liberal Studies (1934) and the School of Business Administration (1937). In 1937 Archer became the president of the newly incorporated Suffolk University. Archer remained at Suffolk University until his retirement in 1948.

Archer wrote prolifically, and, by 1931, a majority of the courses at Suffolk Law School used textbooks he had written. Among his fourteen published law textbooks were Law Office and Court Procedure (1910), Ethical Obligations of the Lawyer (1910), and The Law of Contracts (1911). A complete bibliography of Archer's published and unpublished works, as well as his radio addresses, is available at the end of this finding aid. Archer became a popular radio broadcaster for NBC in the late 1920s and early 1930s; one of his most popular series was entitled Laws that Safeguard Society. He also wrote the first comprehensive history of the early days of radio, History of Radio to 1926 (1938), as well as Big Business in Radio (1939). Archer, an amateur historian, wrote many articles for various journals and was especially interested in colonial New England history and specifically his ancestry as a Mayflower descendant. He was also passionately interested in politics and considered himself to be a Progressive. Like other Progressives of the time, he was an outspoken critic of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt and the New Deal, which he viewed warily as a dangerous mixture of socialistic and monopolistic programs and ideologies. By 1936, Archer had associated himself with the National Jeffersonian Democratic Party, an anti-Roosevelt splinter organization. Archer's book On the Cuff (1944) was a scathing attack on the New Deal and its programs.

In retirement Gleason Archer established a successful blueberry farm in Pembroke, Massachusetts. He also founded the Massachusetts Cultivated Blueberry Association and was appointed director of the Pembroke Historical Society. He remained an active writer throughout the 1950s. After the death of his wife Elizabeth in 1961, Archer married Pauline (Polly) Clark in 1963. Archer was diagnosed with cancer in 1965 and died on June 28, 1966.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The Gleason Leonard Archer Personal Papers, spanning the period of 1790 until 1999, document the personal and professional activities of Suffolk University's founder. The forty-seven boxes of materials are organized into six series: Series 1, Writings, 1899-1962, n.d.; Series 2, Radio materials, 1929-1940, n.d.; Series 3, Correspondence, 1818-1999, n.d.; Series 4, Personal, 1790-1979, n.d.; Series 5, Photographs, c. 1865-1998, n.d.; Series 6, Special Materials, c. 1900s-1939, n.d.

The collection provides insight into Archer's personal and professional life, including his role in providing access to higher education; legal education; the history of Suffolk University; the early history of radio; early New England colonial history; politics in the New Deal era; and biographical information about the Archer and Williams families. The bulk of the collection, however, covers the period from 1899 until 1962 and consists of Archer's writings and materials related to radio broadcasting. The materials include manuscript and typescript drafts of his books, journal articles, speeches, promotional pamphlets, unpublished materials, and many of his radio broadcasts. Other sections of the collection contain correspondence; journals; biographical materials; research files; family papers such as account books, contracts, personal files, and writings; photographs; scrapbooks; funeral notices and obituaries; and personal artifacts, including his Suffolk ring, desk and briefcase; and several audio recordings of his radio broadcasts.

The most significant topics and events documented by the collection include Archer's writings on early New England colonial history, law, radio, politics and the history of Suffolk University. The collection illuminates Archer's personal life through his journals and correspondence with friends, family and national figures, such as former President Calvin Coolidge and former mayor of Boston John B. Hynes.

CONTAINER LIST

Series 1: Writings, 1899-1962, n.d.

Description: The Writings series is divided into three sub-series: Works -- Published, Works -- Unpublished and Articles and Speeches. The Works -- Published sub-series contains manuscripts and typescripts for books written by Archer, including his law textbooks, several books dealing with colonial New England history, the history of Suffolk Law School, the history of radio, and President Roosevelt's New Deal. Of particular note is Archer's History of Radio to 1926, historically important as the first comprehensive history of radio. This sub-series also contains scrapbooks relating to the early history of colonial New England and several poems by Archer published in various newspapers. The Works -- Unpublished sub-series contains a great deal of autobiographical material, unpublished historical writings relating to early American and New England history, children's stories written by Archer, miscellaneous poems, a prayer, and a draft chapter for a compilation book on television. The Articles and Speeches sub-series contains articles written for a variety of journals, magazines and newspapers, as well as letters to the editor; a short story; and speeches given on a wide range of subjects, though most deal with historical, legal or political topics.

Note: A selection of Archer's publications is available at the Suffolk Law Library while many others are only available at the University Archives; the books located in the Archives are non-circulating.

Arrangement: Items in the Works--Published sub-series (boxes 1-4), are arranged alphabetically by title, although scrapbooks are listed last. Works -- Unpublished sub-series (boxes 5-13) are arranged alphabetically. Articles and Speeches (boxes 13 and 14) are arranged chronologically.

Series 4: Personal, 1790-1979, n.d.

Description: The Personal series is divided into four sub-series: Journals, Biographical Materials, Research Materials, and Family Materials. The Journals sub-series contains the four personal journals written by Gleason L. Archer, including a journal documenting life at his family's camp, "Reverie." The Biographical Materials sub-series consists of biographical writings about Archer; records and ephemera related to Archer's childhood in Maine and the history of the area; his books and class notebooks; records that document Archer's activities in retirement and death in 1966. The Research Materials sub-series contains Archer's files related to his family's genealogy, presumably used as source material for his written accounts of the family's history. The Family Materials sub-series includes files created by or about Archer's immediate and extended families. See also: Series 3: Family Correspondence.

Arrangement: The Journals sub-series (boxes 1, 2 and OS6), the Biographical Materials sub-series (boxes 2 and 3) and Family Materials sub-series (boxes 4, 5, OS1, OS2, OS4 and OS5) are arranged chronologically, with undated material last.
